

The Rights of Resident Councils in Nursing Homes

The 1987 Nursing Home Reform Act guarantees nursing home residents a number of important rights to enhance their nursing home experience and improve facility-wide services and conditions. Key among these rights is the right to form and hold regular private meetings of an organized group called a resident council.

Facilities certified for Medicare and Medicaid must provide a meeting space, cooperate with the council's activities, and respond to the group's concerns. Nursing facilities must appoint a staff advisor or liaison to the resident council, but staff and administrators have access to council meetings only by invitation.

Specifically, the federal law includes the following requirements on resident councils:¹

- A resident has the right to organize and participate in resident groups in the facility.
- The facility must provide a resident group, if one exists, with private meeting space.
- Staff or visitors may attend meetings at the group's invitation.
- The facility must provide a designated staff person responsible for providing assistance and responding to written requests that result from group meetings.
- When a resident group exists, the facility must listen to the views and act upon the grievances and recommendations of residents and families concerning proposed policy and operational decisions affecting resident care and life in the facility.
